The Twelve Days of Summer

DEAR Readers ... It's Time to Drop Everything and Read!

Here are some fun reads for a sizzling summer's day when it's too hot to do anything but ... Drop Everything and Read!

Drop down under for a trip to Australia. Notable travel writer Bill Bryson is a tour guide with a sense of humor and an eye for the unusual in this recent work In a Sunburned Country.

In Summertime, author Raffaella Barker continues the story of Venetia Summers whom we met in the prequel Hens Dancing. Venetia drops everything in favor of an idle moment in the garden, in the rain, a daydream. Spending a lazy summer's day with Venetia is sheer pleasure.

The year is 1968, before the advent of electronic conveniences. Nine individuals drop everything—careers, families, responsibilities—and take to sea for a non-stop sailing race around the world. Pick up this page turner, A Voyage for Madmen, by Peter Nichols.

Peter Mayle's Anything Considered features Luciano Bennett, an English expatriate who abandons his successful career for a business venture and a home in a French village. When the business goes bust, he places an advertisement in the newspaper volunteering his services to do anything. A job involving truffles leads Bennett to Monaco and hilarious adventure.

In The Other Side of Everest: Climbing the North Face through the Killer Storm, Matt Dickinson gives his eyewitness account of adventure and disaster on the Himalayan summit with its shear drops and tormenting weather.

Jeanne Marie Laskas gives up her life in the city for a dream of moving to the country in her memoir Fifty Acres and a Poodle: A Story of Love, Livestock and Finding Myself on a Farm. Drop by Laskas' farmstead and meet helpful neighbors, a pack of pets, and the mule.

Suffering from writer's block, Jay Mackintosh relocates to the sleepy French countryside in an attempt to recapture the magic that vanished 20 years ago. In Blackberry Wine, Joanne Harris invites us to drop in with Jay as he creates a future and recalls the past. Anne Morrow Lindbergh leaves home and family for a peaceful beach vacation. Dropping out of routine for a few weeks, Lindbergh spends time reflecting and writing. Initially a personal journal, Gift from the Sea has become a timeless volume for all readers, as pertinent today as it was forty years ago.

In an attempt to pay the bills, May, Harriet and Sally leave their daily lives behind to work on the Rose Revived, May's canal boat. Read on as they form friendships and share dreams in Katie Fforde's Rose Revived.

A fiftieth birthday propels Nan out her front door and into her car for cross-country soul searching. She conquers fears, savors small satisfactions, meets people from all walks of life, and spends time just thinking in Pull of the Moon by Elizabeth Berg.

Yearning for freedom, lawyer Rob Wyatt drops the Alfa Romeo and the luxury apartment for a Toyota and an island bungalow in this story of reassessment and discovery. Josephine Humphreys' Fireman's Fair is a compelling tale of comfort and camaraderie.

Drop in for a visit with a delightful, albeit unconventional family in this tale involving a magic hat, a newfound fortune, and a run-down estate house in the countryside of England. Mary Wesley's Haphazard House is a fun-filled family read.

A house in Tuscany, food, friends, customs, and home improvements make Frances Mayes' Under the Tuscan Sun a best bet for armchair travelers who want to drop into the slower pace of this enchanting Italian region. Continue with the sequel Bella Tuscany.

Escape with comic book artist Joseph Kavalier for action and adventure in Michael Chabon's Amazing Adventures of Kavalier & Clay, an unpredictable story set in 1939.
