In days of vore, storytellers held an honored position in Ireland. They roamed the countryside, reciting tales and weaving magic with words. That tradition lives on with storyteller Jim Hawkins who was raised in County Westmeath, Ireland. Mr. Hawkins, an English teacher and member of the Arena Players, has collected the songs and stories of his homeland and has performed them in schools and libraries throughout Long Island. Join him for a hilarious, toe-tapping "wee bit of Ireland." All are welcome.

Introducing Living in Northport-East Northport

a long-time resident with new community pursuits you'll want to take a look at our recently revised and updated brochure Living in Northport-East Northport. This compilation of local contacts includes organizations involved with health, government, education, transportation, business, social services, senior citizens, arts, music, museums, animals, and recreation. In addition to key phone numbers, the guide highlights important local materials available at the Library. Copies of Living in Northport-East Northport are available at the Reference Desks in both buildings

More information about our community Is there a historical society in Northport?

Where can I find a Notary Public? What is the boating safety hotline? The answer to these and many other questions can be found in the Library's Information and Referral (I&R) files located at the Reference Desk. These files are a starting point for information on community groups, social service agencies, and local governmental agencies that may not be easily found in a phone directory.

Another important local information source is the Suffolk Sourcebook. This invaluable resource can be accessed through the Library's homepage at nenpl.org. Just click "SuffolkWeb" on the blue bar. Then click on the link to the Ready Reference group of databases. You will find the link to Suffolk Sourcebook. The Suffolk Sourcebook contains listings for clubs, organizations, and associations serving the residents of Suffolk County.
