"Our Town Photos" by Alice Spiciarich

Alice Spiciarich moved to Northport thirty years ago. As an active Cub Scout leader, she involved her scouts in a project in which they placed photographs inside large, clear ornaments to be given as holiday gifts. This project soon became a small cottage industry, and Mrs. Spiciarich's personalized ornaments have found their way all over the country and even overseas. In this exhibit she shares photos of area landmarks, schools, and churches.

Meet the Author: Joan Bauer

Thursday, October 16, Northport Library

If you want to read good story and laugh while you are at it, Joan Bauer is the author for you. Her young adult novels are coming-of-age stories that deal with relationship among family members. Though not all of her characters are in traditional families, they are interesting and authentic. Whether her protagonists are selling shoes, growing pumpkins, or waiting tables, Bauer's first person narratives have teens whose voices ring warm and

Joan Bauer says of her writing, "I attempt in my work to explore the inner workings of people's passions with soul and humor; to show how laughter in the midst of pain can eventually bring hope; and to illustrate how great adversity, when dealt with, can bring real strength."

Copies of her books will be available for you to purchase and have autographed. Refreshments will be served. Registration began last month; inquire at the Northport Library.

Books by Joan Bauer:

Ivy treks into the wilderness to interview her reclusive aunt and research her family's history.

Hope Was Here

When Hope and her aunt travel from Brooklyn to Wisconsin to work as waitresses they become embroiled in a local political scandal.

Rules of the Road

Jenna works part-time in a shoe store and one summer she is hired by her boss to be a cross-country chauffeur. Along the way, she learns a lot more than the "rules of the road."

Ellie works to grow the biggest pumpkin for the Iowa State Fair as she tries to lose weight, meet her first boyfriend, and deal with personal problems.

Tree is in seventh grade and already over six feet tall. To make matters worse, his parents are divorcing. A good sense of humor helps him deal with everything that comes his way.
