Communication Across the Ages
A New Museum Cove Exhibit

Communication is defined as the exchange of thoughts, feelings, and ideas. Over the years, people have used many different methods to communicate. From the very first day of life, when newborns cry to signal their needs, to the complex systems we use today—email, Facebook, Twitter—communication is an essential part of our lives. To learn more about the history of communication, visit Northport's new exhibit Communication Across the Ages.

Drop in at the Pioneer Museum in Commack to see the exhibit and participate in an activity. Effective October 11, 2012, the Pioneer Museum will become our featured partner.
