

spanish lesson difference between tener and tener que

The main difference is that tener means "to have" (possession), while tener que means "to have to" (obligation) to do something. ☺

Tener (To Have)

Tener is used to express possession of objects, physical traits, age, and various idiomatic expressions related to physical states. ☺

- Possession:

- Tengo un coche. (I have a car.)
- Ella tiene tres libros. (She has three books.)

- Age:

- ¿Cuántos años tienes? (How old are you? - literally: How many years do you have?)
- Tengo diecisiete años. (I am seventeen years old.)

- Idiomatic Expressions (physical states):

- Tengo hambre. (I am hungry - literally: I have hunger.)
- Tengo frío. (I am cold - literally: I have cold.)
- Tengo sueño. (I am sleepy/tired.) ☺

Tener que (To Have To / Must) ☺

Tener que is a phrase used to express a specific, personal obligation or necessity to perform an action. It is always followed by a verb in its infinitive form (the dictionary form ending in -ar, -er, or -ir), which does not change. ☺

The structure is: Conjugated tener + que + Infinitive verb. ☺

- Obligation/Necessity:

- Tengo que estudiar. (I have to study.)

- Tienes que llamar a mamá. (You have to call mum.)
- Él tiene que trabajar mañana. (He has to work tomorrow.)

Key Takeaway

Phrase	Meaning	Usage	Example
Tener	To have	Possession, age, certain states	Tengo dinero. (I have money.)
Tener que	To have to	Personal obligation/necessity	Tengo que irme. (I have to go.)

You must conjugate the verb tener to match the subject of the sentence in both cases. For example, in the present tense, the forms are:

- (Yo) tengo
- (Tú) tienes
- (Él/Ella/Usted) tiene
- (Nosotros) tenemos
- (Vosotros) tenéis
- (Ellos/Ellas/Ustedes) tienen

3 ways to express obligation in Spanish: 'deber', 'tener que' and 'hay que'

The Coffee Break Spanish Show - Season 2, Episode 3

Share This Post

Knowing how to appropriately express obligation in Spanish is a useful aspect to get to grips with if you're a learner of the language. In Spanish, there are three main phrases used to convey that someone must or has to do something: deber, tener que and hay que.

Understanding these expressions is useful for many everyday situations, but it's also a topic that our Coffee Break community asks us about a lot, as it can be difficult to know when and how to use each expression.

The Coffee Break Spanish Show is a series of podcast episodes, in which we tackle tricky topics for Spanish learners. In this episode, join Anabel and Concha to learn how to express obligation in Spanish using these 3 main expressions.

So, let's get started with looking at deber, tener que and hay que in Spanish, and we'd suggest you listen along to the podcast episode as you read.

1. 'deber' + infinitive

The verb deber in Spanish is used to express a strong sense of obligation and it is the equivalent of the English word "must".

Let's start by reviewing the conjugation of deber. The good news is that it is a regular verb in the present tense.

deber conjugation – present tense

(yo) debo

(tú) debes

(él/ella/usted) debe

(nosotros/nosotras) debemos

(vosotros/vosotras) debéis

(ellos/ellas/ustedes) deben

To say that someone must do something, we conjugate deber according to the person, then add the second verb in its infinitive form. Let's see some examples:

Debemos hacer los deberes.

We must do our homework.

Debes aprender idiomas.

You must learn languages (addressing one person, a specific "you").

Pay attention to the next example, which is slightly different.

Se debe reciclar.

You / one / everyone must recycle (addressing a general "you").

While deber + infinitive can be used to say what an individual person or group of people must do, the construction se debe + infinitive expresses a more general obligation in Spanish – something that everyone, or people in general must do.

2. 'tener que' + infinitive

The phrase tener que in Spanish conveys a slightly less strong sense of obligation compared to deber. It translates as “to have to” in English and is commonly used in everyday situations.

The verb tener was the focus of the previous episode of The Coffee Break Spanish Show, in which we learned 10 other everyday phrases that use tener. So, in this episode we're adding an 11th common, everyday tener expression: tener que.

Tener is an irregular verb in the present tense, so let's start by reviewing its conjugation:

tener conjugation – present tense

(yo) tengo

(tú) tienes

(él/ella/usted) tiene

(nosotros/nosotras) tenemos

(vosotros/vosotras) tenéis

(ellos/ellas/ustedes) tienen

To say that someone has to do something, we conjugate tener according to the person, then add que, followed by the second verb in its infinitive form. Let's see some examples:

Tengo que repasar los verbos irregulares.

I have to review / go over the irregular verbs.

Tenéis que llamar a mamá.

You (plural) have to call mum.

As we just saw with deber, tener que also has an alternative construction using se. Like se debe + infinitive, se tiene que + infinitive is used to express a wider obligation in Spanish – addressing people in general, rather than one specific person or group of people. For example:

Se tiene que cuidar el planeta.

You / one / everyone has to take care of the planet (addressing a general "you").

In many contexts, tener que and deber are roughly interchangeable, so don't worry too much about using one over the other to express obligation in Spanish. Just remember that tener que uses que after the conjugated verb, while deber does not.

3. 'hay que'

The third expression we're going to look at for expressing obligation in Spanish is hay que. Hay que + infinitive is only used to indicate a general obligation, just like se debe or se tiene que, and it conveys a similar idea to "one must" or "it is necessary to" in English.

And the good news with hay que is that we don't have to think about conjugating the verb – it is a set expression that is simply followed by the infinitive. Let's see some examples:

Hay que limpiar la casa.

One has to clean the house. / You (general) have to clean the house. / The house has to be cleaned.

Hay que ser puntual.

One has to be punctual. / You (general) have to be punctual.

Using hay que in Spanish is particularly useful when you want to express an obligation without targeting anyone specifically, by turning a direct suggestion into a more general statement.

In the podcast episode, Anabel gives us a great example: imagine you've been the one cleaning the house every time for the last while, and you think it's time others helped out. In this situation, you might say hay que limpiar la casa to make the statement more general and less direct than if you were to say debes limpiar la casa or tienes que limpiar la casa.

A visual summary of expressions of obligation in Spanish

How to express obligation

deber + infinitive
must do something

se debe + infinitive
one must do something

tener que + infinitive
to have to do something

se tiene que + infinitive
one has to do something

hay que + infinitive
one has to do something